

Product design procedure: Application to chemical process optimization

조성우, 이영학, 한종훈*

서울대학교

(chhan@snu.ac.kr*)

We aim to propose a software design procedure for process optimization based on product design methodology. The procedure consists of three steps: definition of the main function, decomposition of the main function into sub-functions, and implementation. Using the proposed scheme, a web-based system for plant-wide process optimization was developed. The result shows that carrying out a chemical process optimization project saves two resources: cost and time.